Omer Van den Bergh is emeritus professor Health Psychology at the University of Leuven (2018). He is supervisor of the Flemish Association for Behavior therapy. Since 1988, he taught health psychology and other courses at the University of Leuven, first as a postdoctoral fellow (1988), professor (1995) and senior professor (1998) to students of psychology, medicine and physical education. He was member of the editorial board of several journals, was associate editor of "Biological Psychology" between 1999 and 2015, and former president of the International Society for the Advancement of Respiratory Psychophysiology (ISARP). He was visiting professor at Baguio (the Philippines), Lima (Peru) and Rome (Italy). He has currently a research affiliation to the Institute of Cognitive Sciences and Technologies (ISTC), a research institute of the National Research Council (CNR) of Italy, and is a Mercator Fellow at the DFG (German National Research Foundation). He is involved in several international research programs as external advisor (e.g. in Holland, Germany, France, Denmark, Italy, etc..).

He was director of the Research Group on Health Psychology at the University of Leuven from 1998 till 2015, and co-founder and member of the Board of ISW Limits (now Pulso Europe), a spinoff company of the University of Leuven providing services to prevent stress and improve well-being in organisations. Between January 2016 and October 2020, he was Ombudsperson of the University of Leuven. In November 2018, he received a Lifetime Achievement Award from the International Society for Behavioral Medicine (ICBM, Santiago, Chile).

Omer Van den Bergh is an expert in the broad area of the relationship between health and behavior. Specific key words in his work are symptom perception and (respiratory) psychophysiology in response to stress and aversive somatic experiences. His research involves both normal subjects in laboratory experiments, clinical studies on psychosomatic and pulmonary patients in the university hospital, and field studies on subjective health symptoms. He published over 300 papers and chapters in international journals and books.
